Freestyle Skating competitions:

FREESTYLE SLALOM: is a segment of skating where skaters combine multiple dance, like moves through lines of cones placed at various intervals. In order for this sport to be complete, skaters will skate to their choice of music to express their "dance".

For competition purposes, participants have to complete their routine through 3 lines of cones with 0.5,, 0.8 m and 1.2 m intervals.

SPEED SLALOM: is about dashing and weaving through a line of cones placed at 0.8 m intervals. The whole objective is to complete the line of cones as fast as possible.

FREESTYLE SLIDES: is a relatively new segment of freestyle skating. Slides are essentially stopping moves but skaters have to combine different styles to achieve a "trick".

Competition structure:

- Primary competition structure requires stricter adherence to rule where participants have to combine factors such as technique and style in order to score points. Participants are also required to perform within a specific time range.
- Secondary competition, Battle Slalom, rules are more casual such that participants do not have to have a complex set of moves combination. The main emphasis in this competition is about technique.

5 categories of competition

- Classic Slalom: Men, Ladies, Junior
- Speed Slalom: Men, Ladies, Junior
- Freestyle Slides: Men, Ladies, Junior
- Battle Slalom: Men, Ladies
- Jam Slalom: 2 or more in a group.
